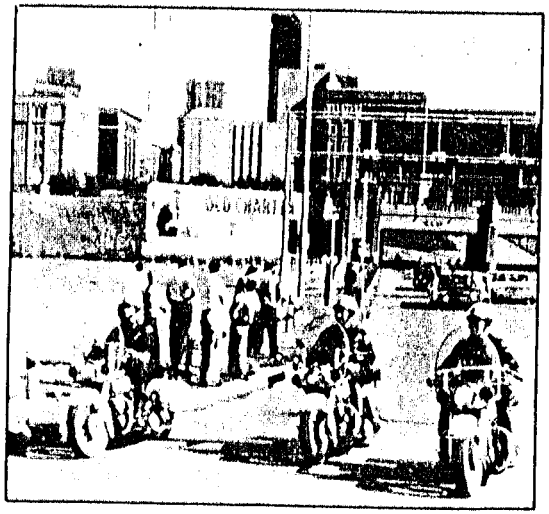
SCENES FROM AN ASSASSINATION



Speeding

The clock atop the school book depository still read 12:30 when the presidential limousine, bearing a mortally wounded President Kennedy, sped under the railroad bridge, top photo. The three motorcycle officers apparently knew nothing was amiss. But in the car behind Kennedy's limousine, Secret Service agents and presidential aides were painfully aware of the tragedy as their vehicle turned on to Stemmons Freeway.

— Photos by Mel McIntire